TRIP TO INDIAN RESERVATION

Clouderoff Visitors Make the Drive in a Day, Clouderoff and Return.

(By Mrs. W. S. Tilton.)

Clouderoff, N. M., July 28.—Alarm clocks were not necessary to awaken the 20 picnicers who were to go on the excursion to the Indian reservation yesterday, as every one was out of bed eager for the trip by the time the full-throated robins had sent up their first hymn of praise. The morning was gloriously beautiful.

At last the four backs were filled and the horseback riders mounted and all were well on their way.

Unanimously the picnicers exclaimed, "how beautiful," when on rounding a bend in the road, came into a deep canyon, with a natural park on the left, a mountain on the right, with natural springs of clear, cold, bubbling water gushing out of the side, one being a sulphur spring. Seemingly to block the way was old Sierra Blanca, snow-capped and low clouds obscuring part of it.

At last the party came to the Indian tepees, scattered clear along until finally they reached the agency and noted the wonderful improvement in the buildings and grounds over last year. Few Indians were to be seen, as it is vacation time from the school and they were mostly out on their farms.

After a picnic dinner, spread under a big cottonwood tree by a babbling brook, and of the side, a camp fire, the members of the party went off in search of kodak views, hunting up Indian baskets, etc. Some called upon Agent Carroll, who said that there are just four hundred and sixty Indians left on the reservation, and explained many other interesting things. After a stop of three hours the tired but happy crowd turned their faces Clouderoffward. Those who were:

W. O. Ansley and sons, Will and John Ansley, of Houston; Paul Meerschmidt of San Antonio; Frank J. Norwell of Denver; W. L. Haggerty of New York; W. H. Tuttle and son, Jolly; R. E. Horton and Lee Anderson; Mrs. Cunningham of Beaumont, and Miss Faulk of San Antonio; Mrs. J. A. Eddy and daughters, Sarah and Kathryn of Denver; Mrs. W. S. Tilton and son, Miss Lucille Stonerod of Colorado City and Alberta Heep, El Paso, and Paula Meerschmidt of an Antonio.

REIGHTBODY CO.

FAIR INVITATION SENT ROOSEVELT

Chamber of Commerce and Mayor Request Ex-President's Presence.

An effort is being made by the El Paso chamber of commerce, in conjunction with the American Mining congress, which will be held in Los Angeles September 25 to October 1, inclusive, to have the original conservationist, Theodore Roosevelt, attend the mining congress this fall. The chamber of commerce is deeply interested in mining, as was witnessed by its resolution and petition to the congress at its last session favoring the establishment of the national bureau of mines.

If Mr. Roosevelt accepts the invitation to attend the mining congress, it is probable that he will visit El Paso while going to or returning from the congress and the chamber of commerce has invited him to do so with a letter from the mayor extending an invitation on the part of the city, the chamber of commerce has sent its resolutions to Mr. Roosevelt.

AN HOUR IN COURT WITH POLICE JUDGE

To furnish a certain amount of mandarin amusement for the court hangers-on. "No. 365—Miguel Marcos," calls the recorder, looking at his record book. Miguel is charged with being drunk and fighting. His arrest was made by officer Murray. He pleads guilty with an alacrity that is surprising and $5 is the fine he draws.

The Vagrancy Charge.

Joseph Peel, charged with vagrancy, a case carried over from the morning session, is next called, and Joseph appears with several witnesses to prove that he is not guilty. These witnesses tell of knowing the defendant of his work, he is a small, little fellow on El Paso street and had gone broke. This is reiterated by the defendant himself, who has obtained a clean shave since his first appearance in court. A rooming house keeper testifies that Peel owned her $10 room rent. He is told to rustle the money for the room rent and he will be discharged. Joe begins rustling immediately by getting out of court as fast as possible.

Case 362, that of a per legged negro, and of Henry O'Neil, another east Texas negro, is called. The two negroes tell the court that they are members of the Aztec club, a negro organization. The recorder thereupon informs that the Aztec club has lost two good members, and each is given a fine of $30, which means a rock pile session.

Pete Celebrates.

Case 357, which was that of Pedro Berrovo is called, and Pete gets a chance to tell the court how he happened to be drinking. He was celebrating the opening of a new saloon. His celebration cost him $1.

The white woman, a Canadian and a negro, are next herded and sworn. It was one of those glimpses of depravity as it exists on the south side. The white man was given a severe lecture by the judge. "What do you suppose your white haired old father up there in Canada would say if he knew this?" the recorder asked. "I know it is wrong, judge," the Canadian replied, a faint hope that he would be let off easy because of his father arising in his mind. Nothing doing in the hope business. Each of the men draws $25 as his fine and the women $10. They were all herded into the dock and the mill continued the record.

Underworld Curtain Rises.

Again the curtain of the underworld is drawn aside and a distressing story of a woman's depravity is revealed. She was a dope fiend who had been cured of her habit, but had relapsed and been locked up until she was broken of the habit. She swore that she had not been using it, although her pasty face denied the assertion. The complaining witness was a negro, a black warlike negro, wearing a castoff Pullman cap, a ragged suit and a part of No. 12 shoes. A quarrel which implicated the white woman and the negro was aired. The plaintiff is allowed to go without a fine and the negro is told to get out of the courtroom or he would draw a fine.

A domestic difficulty south of the color line is called. Joe Meyers had put a morning badge on his wife's right eye that was a beauty, to say the least. An eye like that was adjusted at $15 by the recorder and Joe went back into the pen.

Jack Doe, who was not Jack Doe at all, was fined $1 for striking a negro porter on the anatomy somewhere in one of the dry goods stores.

Joe Rabel, a South El Paso street merchant, drew a fine of $5 for blocking the sidewalk with his boxes.

The Finale. Then came the serio-comic finale of the session. Barely showing above the prisoners' rail was a kinky haired little plectaniny. Without waiting until his case was called, he slipped out of the dock and with eyes shiny with tears, poured out his heart to Judge Lea. He had run away before, the judge had told him where he was going to send him if he didn't behave, but he had gone to the 10 cent theater. He had got sick and the big policeman had got him. Comically pathetic the little burr head told his story with all the sorrow of a sage in his plaintive voice as he pleaded his case. He was allowed to go.

This was one afternoon's session, a typical hour in the police court.
